SCHMITZ INTENDED RUEF'S BETRAYAL

The Boss Cleverly Confessed, Leaving His Partner Helpless.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 18.—Mayor Schmitz says that he and Ruef had an agreement that they would stand together and both confess, if cornered. As a result of Ruef's betrayal there is war between the two indicted men. It has been learned that when Ruef and Schmitz learned that a prosecution was imminent, they met at Schmitz' house in Vallejo. At that time Schmitz is reported to have said:

"If worst comes to worst, and we see that we are caught, and a conviction seems sure, we will stick together and see what we can get out of the prosecution."

The compact was verbal, neither man, of course, being stupid enough to put it into writing. Schmitz, Ruef charges, intended to confess, leaving Ruef out in the cold, but the "boss" was too quick for him. Ruef refuses to see the mayor.

Rudolph Spreckels, speaking for the committee of seven, appointed to restore order and outline plans for the future conduct of the city government, says that it was the intention of the prosecution to leave Mayor Schmitz and the supervisors in office until the close of the year. The plan is compulsory, there being no legal means of ousting them. Even if they remained until a decision could be obtained from the Supreme Court on appeal, which would be taken, they would be able to serve out their terms. This places San Francisco in the hands of the boddies for seven months longer. A close watch will be kept upon their official acts, and a check will be given the officials in any attempt to indulge in what Mr. Spreckels calls "the tendency to take a little extra compensation."

It is openly said that it would greatly simplify the situation if Schmitz could be induced to disappear. In this case, no very energetic search would be made for him.

The bark W. B. Flint with a cargo of general merchandise sailed from San Francisco for Honolulu on May 22.
